New computer support company, Rebootthat.com announces exciting plans to offer efficient and competitively priced IT support within London. Clients can have their computer fixed in the convenience of their own home or via remote assistance.

Chelsea, (London) - Kevin Abbott, founder and director of Rebootthat.com provides an efficient computer support service offering value for money rates within the local areas of Battersea, Chelsea, Pimlico and Victoria. The company operates a 'no fix no fee policy' in which clients can feel reassured that they are only being charged for solutions offered.

This convenient service will save people the trouble of having to cart their computers to a repair shop. Instead, Rebootthat.com will visit the clients in their home at a time convenient for them. This service is perfect for clients with desktop computers who cannot physically pack their computer up to take to a repair shop for inspection.

Kevin Abbott has remarked 'our customers are our number one concern, and we strive on providing exceptional customer service. Our friendly and enthusiastic engineers are all IT professionals, with many years experience in the field. After they have fixed your computer, they will give you a call a week later to see how your computer is performing, because we want to ensure we do our jobs properly, and that our customers are happy'.

This convenient home service is being launched just in time for the winter season, so for those people that do not want to venture out into the cold and the rain to fix their computer, Rebootthat.com offers the perfect solution.
