Rebootthat.com Ventures into the Student Market offering Convenient Computer Support in London, UK

Rebootthat.com, has announced plans to venture into the student market, by offering discounted IT support in the convenience of their own home or via remote pc repair.

Battersea, (London) - Kevin Abbott, founder and director of Rebootthat.com is offering an efficient London computer repair service with value for money rates within the local areas of Battersea, Chelsea, Pimlico and Victoria. The company operates a â€˜no fix no fee policyâ€™ in which students can feel reassured that they are not being charged unless a solution is offered.

The computer support service is great for students who may be experiencing computer problems, and have assignment deadlines looming. They can contact Rebootthat.com and can have their computer fixed within their home or remotely for a discounted price.

Kevin Abbott, founder and director of Rebootthat.com has remarked â€˜from being a student myself, I know what itâ€™s like; you have an assignment to complete, but your computer keeps crashing, or your printer isnâ€™t printing, or the screen isnâ€™t displaying what it should be. Itâ stressful, especially when you have deadlines to meet. We recognise that students donâ€™t always have the available funds to fork out for new computers, which is why we are offering discounted rates and a stress-free support service for all students within the local area and Internationally via remote pc repair softwareâ€™.

This convenient service will save students the trouble of having to carry their computers to a repair shop. Instead, Rebootthat.com will visit them in their home at a time convenient for them. This service is perfect for students with desktop computers who cannot physically pack their computer up to take to a repair shop for inspection.

Kevin Abbott has remarked â€˜our customers are our number one concern, and we strive on providing exceptional customer service. Our friendly and enthusiastic engineers are all IT professionals, with many years experience in the field. After they have fixed your computer, they will give you a call a week later to see how your computer is performing, because we want to ensure we do our jobs properly, and that our customers are happyâ€™.

This convenient home service is being launched just in time for the winter season, so for those students that do not want to venture out into the cold and the rain in search of computer solutions, Rebootthat.com is the way forward.

About Rebootthat.com:
Rebootthat.com is a computer support company offering stress-free IT solutions to both residents and small businesses within Chelsea, Battersea and Pimlico, London, and International remote computer repair.

They offer a range of services including virus removal, performance tuning, data recovery and website design at competitive prices.

http://rebootthat.com